

Hagin Command Your Day #1

PDF for streaming

Before the sun rises, your words must rise first because the day listens to the voice of faith.

Every morning, before the first ray of light touches the earth, heaven leans in to hear what you will say.

The spiritual atmosphere around you responds not to your feelings, not to your plans, but to your words.

You see, your words are not just sounds.

They are forces. They shape realities.

They frame destinies.

They carry divine authority when spoken from a heart of faith.

The believer who understands this truth knows that mornings are not meant for complaints or confusion, but for commands.

When your words rise before the sun, you are not just speaking into the air. You are establishing divine order in your day.

The unseen realm takes instruction from the words you release.

Heaven and earth align themselves with the decree of the believer who speaks with conviction and faith.

There's a moment in the stillness before the day begins when creation waits. It's waiting for your command.

Because

As a child of God, your words carry weight.

You are not a victim of the day. You are its commander.

The power that spoke the universe into existence lives in you.

And that same creative force flows through your mouth.

When you say, "This will be a day of peace," heaven begins to move things into position to bring peace.

When you decree, "I walk in favor today," doors begin to open before your feet even move.

You can't wait for the day to decide how it will treat you.

You must decide how the day will unfold.
